January 2017

Thanks to the SEIU #FightFor15 movement, founded by New York fast food workers five years ago, 19 states and 22 cities and counties will see minimum wage increases in 2017. California’s minimum wage rose on Jan. 1 to $10.50 per hour, up from $10 for companies with more than 25 workers. By 2022, our state minimum wage will reach $15.

Labor Secretary Nominee

The president-elect's choice for secretary of the Department of Labor is fast food executive Andrew Puzder (right), a union critic who wants to automate his restaurants to avoid labor costs.

"PUDZER EARNS IN ONE DAY WHAT THE WORKERS IN HIS STORE EARN IN A YEAR. THE ABSOLUTE ECONOMIC INEQUALITY THAT HE REPRESENTS IS WHAT WE'VE COUNTED ON THE LABOR DEPARTMENT TO STAND AGAINST."

-SEIU International President Mary Kay Henry

ACA Funding In Danger

Congress is threatening to repeal the Affordable Care Act (ACA). This would spike the price of health premiums market-wide, and would roll back prescription drug support for seniors. Across the nation, 30 million Americans could lose health care coverage, and 334,000 Californians could lose their jobs.

It's time to stand together to #fight4ourhealth!

In 2015, undocumented immigrants living in the US paid $11.64 billion in state & local taxes. With comprehensive immigration reform, that number would increase by $2.1 billion.
